As the Managing Director of the National Private Lenders Association (NPLA), I lead a dynamic trade group comprised of capital providers, lenders, and real estate service providers from across the country. We represent more than 100 companies, advocating for industry collaboration, enhanced regulatory standards, and professional integrity within the private lending sector.

My role allows me to leverage strategic partnerships that improve industry practices and advocate for ethical standards that benefit industry professionals and the communities we serve.

In my concurrent role as Chief Strategy and Growth Officer for the National Private Lenders Conference, Private Lender Law, and Private Lender Title, my focus is on cultivating strategic opportunities to drive organizational growth. By overseeing sales, marketing, and operations, I work to enhance innovation and efficiency across these entities, elevating our collective impact on the nonbank lending industry.

I hold a Master's in Leadership Studies from the University of San Diego and come from a background as a professional athlete.
