Tavant

Matthew C. Wood is known in the lending industry for creating powerful business platforms, transforming large systems, and as a thoughtful AI practitioner. With strong industry recognition in the mortgage space, he is sought out for analysis and comment on subjects as: AI, data's role in driving engagement strategy, and successful operational automation. Some of this recent work is available in HousingWire and in the 2024 BAI Executive Report on Innovations in Lending Services.

He is recognized for his success in advocating rich user relationships, practical problem solving, right-sizing technology investment and guiding complex systems towards strategic outcomes. Through over nineteen successful system transformations, along with the launch of many digital properties across North America, UK, and the EU, partnering for growth is the hallmark of his career.

Wood graduated from Brigham Young University with a Master of Organizational Behavior.

Two things that are quite telling: He loves a long gravel bike ride and a steady mountain climb to a snowy summit.
