

Mark Palim

Mark Palim is a recognized industry leader providing objective and insightful analysis of the economy and mortgage market. Most recently he was Chief Economist at Fannie Mae where he was responsible for the company's economic and housing forecast. His team has won several forecasting awards. As Chief Economist he was the company's leading spokesperson with the media, investors and lenders on economic issues affecting the mortgage market. In addition to the economics team, at the time of his exit Mark oversaw the Fixed-Income Investor Relations and Corporate Strategy teams. His research has been published in peer-reviewed journals and received awards from academic societies. Mark has a Ph.D. in economics from George Mason University and is a CFA® charterholder.

